Key Birding Areas and Information

The Blood Farm Trail is a great birding area, especially during migration. The variety of warblers, vireos, and other woodland migrants can be outstanding.

The Flood Control Dam creates a small backwater area where small numbers of migrating waterfowl can be observed.

Petroleum Center is always worth a stop. Check the feeders at the park office and the area around the bridge for swallows and kingfisher. The sycamores along Oil Creek are home to nesting Baltimore oriole, yellow-throated warbler and warbling vireo.

The paved road to the bike trail has a number of small, wet areas along the south hillside. Canada warbler and Louisiana waterthrush traditionally nest in these areas.

The Bike Trail from Titusville to Petroleum Center follows the Oil Creek gorge. Bald eagle numbers are increasing throughout the area. There may be an active nest any anywhere in the park. Please notify the park office of any nests or sightings.
